

america's national parks: a monumental vision by clyde butcher

Nationally-celebrated photographer Clyde Butcher's black and white, large format, landscape photography is reminiscent of Ansel Adams. His art was recently featured in the Ken Burns six-part documentary, The National Parks: America's Best Idea, on PBS. NPR also has taken interest in his environmental photography and interviewed Clyde in late 2009.

The black and white photographs in the exhibit will range in sizes from 22" x 28" inches to 4' x 5' feet. All images feature national parks and federal lands accompanied by a description of Clyde's own insights into the photographs. Retail products will be for sale including books, note cards, DVDs, and prints.

Clyde will travel from his studio in Florida to attend the reception. Tickets will be available for dinner with Clyde following the reception. The gourmet meal will include three courses and beverages for $50 per person. Reservations are required, and can be made by email or phone: clarkgallery@honeywellcenter.org or 260.563.1102 x 501.
